Calls for Early End to Fighting Anti-War Vet Takes Plea to Senate

By Spencer Rich
WASHINGTON, April 23 (UPI).—“Our one last mission is to search out and destroy the last vestige of this barbaric war,” a spokesman for demonstrating war veterans told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday.

Mr. Kerry, meanwhile, told the Foreign Relations Committee that Americans had been sent to die in Vietnam “for the biggest nothing in history.” U.S. soldiers in Vietnam, he said, found that it was “really a civil war” in which the average persons “didn’t know the difference between Communism and democracy and only wanted us to leave them in peace to work in their rice paddies.”

He told the committee his group had organized a demonstration in Detroit a few months ago in which veterans described “war crimes committed in Southeast Asia... told stories of how they personally had raped, cut off ears, cut off heads... blown up bodies, razed villages... poisoned food stocks and, generally ravaged.”

With John Kerry, a Yale University graduate and former U.S. Navy lieutenant, as their spokesman, the Vietnam Veterans Against the War took their plea for an immediate end of the Indochina conflict directly to the committee at a hearing on legislation to end the war.

“Each day someone has to give up his life so that the United States doesn’t have to admit what the world already knows, that we made a mistake; so that President Nixon won’t be, in his own words, ‘the first U.S. president to lose a war.’”

“I understand how many Americans have come to focus on that proposal [a withdrawal date] because of a lack of confidence in past assurances,” he added.

“I think that by the end of 1972, practically all American military personnel will be out of there. I hope sooner, in fact,” said Sen. William Saxbe, R., Ohio. “Our job is finished here and, except for the logistics involved with so large a movement, there is no longer any reason to stay.”

“I’ve been loath to do that,” the majority leader said, “but now I am reconsidering.” Sen. Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, the minority whip, agreed that the veterans made an impact, but he added: “I hope we don’t vote on the basis of how many people come down here to demonstrate on a particular issue.”

“The President’s Vietnamization policy virtually guarantees that our prisoners will remain in their cells, that our troops will remain in danger, that the negotiations will be held and that the killing will continue,” Sen. McGovern said.

Senate Unit Votes to Keep Draft Till '73, Raise GI Pay

WASHINGTON, April 23 (UPI)—The Senate Armed Services Committee voted yesterday to extend the draft two years and begin raising military pay to levels the Nixon administration hopes will produce an all-volunteer army by 1972.

“The bill largely reflecting the ideas of the Democratic majority on the committee, is designed to replace a measure vetoed last year by President Nixon.” That bill limited only expenditures on candidate spending for radio and television time. In vetoing it, Mr. Nixon said it “closed only one hole in a sieve.”

“The bill also would permanently suspend the equal-time rule of the Federal Communications Act for presidential and vice-presidential candidates, making possible televised debates between the Republican and Democratic candidates in presidential election years.”

6 Democrats Attack Nixon On War Policy

Senators in TV Reply To President's Talk

By William Chapman
WASHINGTON, April 23 (UPI).—Hubert Humphrey, Lyndon B. Johnson's Vice-President during the big Vietnam buildup, opened a televised rebuttal of President Nixon's latest Vietnam speech, saying that both political parties bear responsibility for the war, not just Democrats, as he said Mr. Nixon had implied.

Sen. Humphrey said that his speech was anti-war with “considerable heartache... I believe our commitments to the South Vietnamese now have been more than fulfilled.”

Sen. Jackson, generally an administration supporter on the war, seemed to be opening up some ground on which he could differ with Mr. Nixon. He called for a “more affirmative and positive approach” to achieve a cease-fire—“even when the North Vietnamese turn the idea down.”

Sen. McGovern insisted that both the release of the prisoners and the safe withdrawal of remaining U.S. forces depend on establishing a fixed time by when all those forces would be removed.

Sen. East German, without being specific, that Mr. Nixon may hope to make political capital by delaying an end to U.S. participation until an election year.

“This is an action of misguided individuals,” department spokesman Charles Bray said. “It serves no conceivable purpose.”

“The bomb exploded about 20 minutes after the agency and the Associated Press and United Press International received calls in which a male voice said: ‘There have been several time bombs placed in the offices of Amtorg... They will go off in less than 15 minutes. Free all Soviet Jewish prisoners. Let my people go. Never again.’”

WASHINGTON, April 23 (UPI).—The Senate Commerce Committee approved today legislation to limit individual election campaign contributions to $5,000 and clamp a ceiling on the amount a candidate for federal office could spend on advertising.

Illegal Wiretap Use Denied By U.S. in Berrigan Probe

determine the extent of any such surveillance. Judge Herman expressed his personal attitude toward illegal wiretapping later at an immunity hearing. In response to an attorney's comment that “you [the judge] or I could be hurt by illegal wiretapping,” the judge said, “Just a minute. You might be hurt, but I don't think I say anything over the telephone at any time that I would care about.”

Accepting the denial, District Judge E. Dixon Herman refused to ask government prosecutor William S. Lynch if such surveillance was based on the Nixon administration's approval of electronic eavesdropping without a court order when national security is believed to be at stake.

“Three of the subpoenaed witnesses appeared before the grand jury yesterday. All refused to answer questions, except to supply their names. John Swingshish of Washington entered the jury room wearing a blue and white button that read ‘Kidnap Kissinger?’”

Senate Backs Uniform Policy On Desegregation of Schools

By Spencer Rich

WASHINGTON, April 23 (UPI).—The Senate, by a 44-to-34 roll call vote, declared its support yesterday for a uniform national policy of school desegregation.

Illinois Raids Seize Caches Of Explosives

CARBONDALE, Ill., April 23 (Reuters).—Police have seized caches of dynamite, plastic explosives, arms and drugs in a series of raids across southern Illinois.

A total of 144 state, federal and municipal police raided ten communities yesterday and said they believed some of the weapons were destined for the racially-troubled Illinois town of Cairo.

The haul included 800 pounds of dynamite, 60 pounds of plastic explosives, 12 rifles, ten hand guns, a submachine gun, a bazooka, 250 blasting caps and primer cord, 1,000 rounds of ammunition and large quantities of cocaine, heroin, LSD and marijuana.

Mitchell Ware, superintendent of the Illinois Bureau of Investigation, who led the raids, said the haul included information that many weapons and explosives were destined for both black and white factions in Cairo.

Time to Tell Cop From Pig

CLEVELAND, Ohio, April 23 (Reuters).—A judge here has sentenced 19-year-old Robert Vittek to three hours in a pig pen to help him tell the difference between a pig and a policeman.

tion there is based on housing patterns and has never been declared illegal.

Paralysis Feared And a large bloc of civil-rights advocates voted against it. They declared that its actual effect, if it is eventually approved by the House, could be to paralyze efforts to desegregate Southern schools without actually enhancing Northern school desegregation at all.

Before adopting the Stennis amendment, the Senate by a 60-to-22 vote rejected an amendment by Sam J. Ervin Jr., D., N.C., to remove desegregation requirements from the $1.5-billion measure and simply turn the money over to the states to use for any purpose in schools.

The Stennis amendment declares it "the policy of the United States" that various laws "shall be applied uniformly in all regions of the United States in dealing with conditions of segregation by race, whether de jure, or de facto, in the schools of the local educational agencies... without regard to the origin or cause of such segregation."

This language appears to mean that henceforth federal agencies shall enforce school integration requirements in Northern areas where there is a high degree of racial separation, even where it is the result of housing patterns and not of official state and local policies.

But the courts have never declared that kind of racial separation illegal. HEW has no criteria on which to act at present, and there is a specific provision of the 1964 Civil Rights Act which bars housing and other pupil-transfer schemes when employed simply for the purpose of racial balancing, in the absence of legally imposed segregation.

The Stennis amendment does not set aside the 1964 provision, nor does it spell out any criteria for attacking such de facto school segregation.

To put the Stennis amendment into effect, aides to various senators said, Congress would have to legislate to set aside the 1964 restriction and spell out criteria for challenging de facto school segregation, or allow HEW to develop such criteria. Court challenges could then ensue.

Pentagon Urged by NAACP To Act on W. German Bias

By Robert D. McFadden

NEW YORK, April 23 (NYT).—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People told the Defense Department yesterday that discrimination in housing had become "the most pervasive problem" confronting black American servicemen in West Germany.

The NAACP urged, among other measures, that the Pentagon immediately assume all leasing responsibility for off-base housing in West Germany, subletting units to servicemen who would thus be relieved of the burden of fighting landlord discrimination.

The recommendation was contained in a 55-page report compiled by a three-member NAACP investigating team that toured U.S. military bases in West Germany.

Kidnapper Sets Woman Doctor Free

ZURICH, April 23 (Reuters).—A despairing Swiss sauna-bath owner today threatened to commit suicide in his dynamite-packed apartment after abruptly freeing the Austrian woman embassy official he had held hostage for three-and-a-half days.

Dr. Louise Kneissl, 58, head of the Austrian Social Service Bureau, stepped calmly out of the building at dawn and told a policeman, "I am Frau Doktor Kneissl."

She was whisked away in a police car to a secret destination for breakfast, followed by police questioning and a long rest after her ordeal.

Half an hour later her captor, Ferdinand Mueller, 48, telephoned the Neue Zuercher Zeitung newspaper from his barricaded flat and said he intended to kill himself, "because I know the new humiliations and torments which await me."

Drops Plea for Asylum He also told police he was no longer demanding asylum in France for himself and his French-born wife, Simone, 34, and his daughters Monika and Christine, aged 4 and 8.

Mr. Mueller, now alone in his sandbagged, shuttered flat on the second floor of a building which also houses the Austrian consulate, claimed to have 66 pounds of explosives and 100 gallons of gasoline with him. Dr. Kneissl confirmed that Mr. Mueller had explosives.

He had earlier threatened to blow up the house if his conditions for Dr. Kneissl's release were not met. But he finally removed the barricades in front of the door and let her out on his own initiative.

$180-Million Loss Laid to Paris Regime Slaughterhouse Cost Draws Fire of Senate

By James Goldsborough

PARIS, April 23.—The Senate has just published a report accusing the government of responsibility in the loss of $180 million in what has become known as the La Villette slaughterhouse scandal.

The report, which comes after four months of Senate investigation, charges that errors of judgment and "irregularities" resulted in the huge loss. It asserts that "the reputation and the authority of the nation could not withstand a second La Villette affair."

The official report comes after months of rumors about the La Villette affair and the losses involved. Le Monde said today that the Senate investigating commission was the first one set up under the Fifth Republic, and went on to inquire if the government stability provided under the Fifth Republic has been accompanied by "good management and responsibility."

The report accuses the government of entering the project in order to build the most modern and prestigious slaughterhouse in the world. It states that the project—whose total cost would have been $235 million—was far too large for the market and that the facilities already built, totaling $180 million, will have to be destroyed.

Replacing Les Halles The new La Villette facilities, on the northern edge of Paris, were in part to absorb the meat market that used to be located in Les Halles, the old Paris produce center now being torn down.

Giant electronically controlled production lines were built that could never be amortized, states the report. Workers were contracted to be paid at a fixed percentage of total cost, encouraging high costs, it goes on. Slaughter facilities were built on the second floor with no access for the animals, it adds.

The investigating commission, which included several Gaullists, refused to name any names, but indicated clearly that it was "the government" and the "ministers in charge" who should be held to account.

"It is for the government to look for the responsibilities or the human errors and to verify a posteriori that which is not explained by the mass of documents and testimonies," it stated.

Weiss in Essen

ESSEN, Germany.—Peter Weiss had to wait 20 years before his first play, "Die Versicherung," (The Insurance Policy) could be tried on the stage.

In all fairness the boredom is more the result of the flamboyant Stadt Theater production by Hans Neuenfels, a much talked-about young director who climbed on the Weiss text like a rocking-horse, riding it to narcissist climax.

AUTHORS WANTED BY N.Y. PUBLISHER. Leading book publisher seeks manuscripts of all types: fiction, non-fiction, poetry, scholarly and religious works, etc. New authors welcome.

James Saunders at an English Festival

By John Walker
LONDON, April 23.—James Saunders is one of Britain's most considerable playwrights but he has not written a considerable play for a long time.

Now, Mr. Saunders offers us two miraculous new plays, adventurous and experimental, different in style from his past work, where the inspiration was somewhat literary.

The second play begins as a workshop exercise, a jumble of words which gradually form, with sudden clarity, into a Reuters report from the trial of Lt. Col. Leg, of the evidence of a soldier who explained that he shot mothers and children because he was frightened that the babies might have been boobytrapped.

It is an unexpected benison, resulting from his collaboration with people a generation younger than himself, members of The Other Company, the experimental group that forms part of Ed Berman's communal arts organization Inter-Action.

The first half of Mr. Saunders' double bill is about the games people play, the failure of relationships, the inadequacy of communication. Caged within steel scaffolding, framed as if in a Bacon painting, two men and two girls define a solipsistic universe.

The audience is plunged into a maze of disturbing mirrors, of unreal oppositions: Theater life, illusion, reality. But Mr. Saunders goes further. He is not just concerned about the relationship of the theater to society, but the function of art, and the responsibility of the artist.

At the end, Robert Walker movingly delivers a long story of a blind man he used to see being guided along the street by a woman.

'He has found a new commitment to a different kind of a theater.'

Mr. Saunders is not content to tease with this interplay between the actors' true and imagined personalities and their performance. He wants to involve the audience, too.

At the end, you feel you know the actors as people, as individuals rather than as performers. They, too, treat the audience as familiar friends. They are able to strip off their clothes without any embarrassment or exhibitionism, but simply as a natural act.

Their success runs counter to the themes of the play, for they obviously form a community. Mr. Saunders owes a debt, as we do, to the dedication of the actor—Jane Bond, Judy Monahan, Andrew Norton, Robert Walker—and their director, Naftali Yavin.

Regrettably, the plays are not now on show. They could be glimpsed briefly earlier this week as part of the Camden Festival. But I cannot believe that such stimulating theater will be allowed to languish unseen for long.

At the Camden Festival, too, Inter-Action's lunch-hour theater presented Mr. Saunders' short play "Savotry Meringue," directed by Ed Berman, with an excellent tough performance by Frimella Seales as a hardened vaudeville trouper who finds herself abandoned by the author in mid-play.

Deliberately eclectic, with echoes of most modern playwrights, it was often funny. "One at Night," by Denis Canham, at the Royal Court, was a really mad—Blanch, put in a mental hospital for carrying much and making love to a 15-year-old girl, or his judges, middle-class cardboard caricatures. Denis Canham leaves us in no doubt about his answer in his disappointing play on a fascinating theme.

The Art Market Things Will Never Be the Same Again

By Souren Melikian PARIS, April 23.—For the past few years, European professionals have been wondering what will emerge from the tremendous shakeup of the market. Now something has happened. The Wally F. Findlay Galleries International...

Renoir portrait of J.C. Prat as a boy is among works owned by Findlay Gallery.

The Capital

When asked about the capital needed to build the French branch, Souren Melikian, vice-president of Wally F. Findlay Galleries, said that the company has been public for two years. In net sales totaled $6,443,000, slightly more than for the previous year, despite the current...

great artists of the future. But it does not content itself with finding artists. The firm's sales methods deserve careful study.

First, it offers exclusive contracts to a few chosen artists. Sometimes it takes as long as ten years for Findlay to decide to offer an artist a contract. For example, although Poucet arrived in Palm Beach ten years ago and had a show thanks to the Wally Findlay Galleries, she has only been under contract since the beginning of this year.

Three Others

Mrs. Karoff says that the gallery's opening should give a boost to the whole trade and attract more people to the area. She points out that since construction work began at 2 Avenue Matignon, three other galleries have opened within a hundred yards, the Tamenaga Art Gallery from Tokyo, a gallery from Lyons, and a third, smaller gallery.

World Scale

Selling art now apparently requires huge means tapping sources on a world scale. Findlay appears to have solved this problem, and it is reappraised commercial methods. The gallery's view is that it is necessary to discover the

Bohemia Gives Way to Black Tie

By Hebe Dorsey PARIS, April 23.—Black-tie parties are rare enough in Paris but a black-tie party in an art gallery is unheard of. Vernissages tend to cater to Left Bank and you are lucky if you get so much as a glass of champagne and a glass of cognac. But all that changed last night when the Wally F. Findlay Galleries International opened with a black-tie affair...

limousines and champagne galore made this look like the fanciest Opera premiere. Now that the locale has been done over, Mrs. Karoff plans to use it as a home and entertain there a lot. She's had some experience. In New York, but especially in Palm Beach, she was the first to see the potentials of a good party in an art gallery. For one thing, you round up all the rich customers in one neat, golden net.

"We feel that when we present an artist, there must be a beautiful party for him," she said. "We feel that the gallery is the home of the artists and we use it to entertain a lot." "We were the first to have black-tie vernissages and now few openings in New York aren't black tie."

Mrs. Karoff also combined business with charity by lying in the multi-million-dollar jewelry collection, owned by the Owen Chestman Foundation of New York.

Around the European Galleries

PARIS

Nadia Leger, Centre d'Art International, 99 Boulevard Raspail, Paris 6e, to May 10. Nadia Khodosavlevich, the child of a peasant family near Vitebsk, was 15 years old when she met Malевич and studied under him. At the age of 18, she took off on her own, intent on reaching Paris and meeting Fernand Leger. She ultimately succeeded after an adventurous journey, and later she married him. The present exhibition is devoted to works she painted between the ages of 16 and 22 (1920-1926) in the geometric manner of the suprematists. They show a sturdy sense of composition and of movement and a strong native authority. It is a curious leap backwards in time to see these vigorous adolescent works caught in the self-imposed limitations of an artistic theory. Some of the paintings have been done in the past few years, based on sketches made some fifty years ago.

Blanco Gomez, Galerie 9, 9 Rue des Beaux-Arts, Paris 6e, to May 3. Argentine painter Anns Maria Blanco Gomez has a subtle sense of color and its fineness stands out particularly well in these canvases restricted to a single simple form. Occasionally two areas of color will interact to the point of producing an optical blurring that is not unpleasant.

Tromois, Galerie des Peintres Graveurs, 159 Boulevard du Montparnasse, Paris 6e, to May 22. This exhibition of engravings and monotypes by Tromois confirms his consistently able graphic talent which he puts to use in rather simple symbolic juxtapositions. The result is eloquent and, like all eloquence, rather impersonal.

Dall Jewels, Wally F. Findlay Gallery, 2 Avenue Matignon, Paris 8e, to May 22. The big new Paris branch of the American art firm was inaugurated this week with an exhibition of 36 jewels by Dall (an entrance charge of 10 francs—3 francs for children and students—goes to a French charity). The jewels reflect Dall's interest in plus luxury. They are made with flawless craftsmanship and very well displayed. Some reflect the artist's recurrent fantasies, limp waltzes, a large golden, stork-legged elephant galumphing away with an aquamarine obelisk on its back. There is a beating heart made of rubies that effectively conveys the rhythm of an organic pulsation. Dall knows how to use a variety of precious and semi-precious materials and some of his constructions are quite intricate. Others tend to be hand-some but almost banal jewelry enhanced with the iridescent effluvia of low-octane metaphysics.

Salon des Independants, Grand Palais, Avenue Winston-Churchill, Paris 8e, to May 9. This vast exhibition (nearly 5,000 items) is totally unselective—there is no jury to fend off the inane, the inept and the corny and all are welcome. Consequently as you trudge through the endless galleries you begin to feel like someone on the beach after the Torrey Canyon disaster looking for whatever wildlife may have survived. There is a glimmer of quality here and there and it is the visitor's sport to detect it. There is also a retrospective exhibition of about 100 items entitled "De Pont-Aven aux Nabis" and including works by Bonnaud, Gauguin, Maillol, Odilon Redon, Vuillard, and a number of their less famous contemporaries such as Anquetin and Rederick O'Connor.

Tapies, Collecionista, 36, Via Gregoriana, Rome, to May 15. In his recent works (1967-1970), on view at Collecionista, Tapies has achieved something extraordinary. He has been able to dig into his own—and mankind's most intimate and remote past to find runes and signs that may speak to anyone. "There is almost nothing there!" an astonished visitor to the gallery exclaimed. "He's painting nothing, he only makes signs—but how beautiful!"

Fields of flesh white, of moon gray, of sandy gritty ochre, of midnight sooty depths have been poked at, scribbled on, gouged, scratched—with a hairy stroke here, a drip, a glob there and two sudden rough Xs; sometimes squashed paper bags or mattress stuffing are glued on too. (Some of the gestures and mannerisms are also those of De Kooning, Kline, Guston and Trowbridge. Even if they look like everybody else's, they are not like anybody's.)

It seems as if every time Tapies looked at a canvas he was facing undiscovered territory. Each painting is different, has a different tune. Tapies is like a composer writing for a different instrument on each one. The inexhaustible richness of the sensual world is displayed with the most basic and ordinary means. It has been distilled down to a plain somber elegance. The few found objects in spread-out portions worn by daily use, a bunched-up old blanket, a small bathroom mirror that are sometimes attached to the canvases, are not dada or pop things at all, although they are amusing, but serve as added color and line where paint was not enough. There is nothing studied or philosophical here; all is direct, painterly. Tapies, relying on his instinct and unconscious experience alone, has captured the very essence of visual language with a brevity rarely equaled anywhere today. Like all the best in art, Tapies's painting is grandly about painting and nothing else. It is marvelous and reassuring to see a celebrated contemporary changing and growing.

ROME

Scialoja, Collecionista, 36, Via Gregoriana, Rome, to May 15. Scialoja, like Tapies, is internationally known. But he has not really changed his stripes. Once the abstractions of his velern were made of ragged, often lacy bands, some stained with large marks like oversize prints of lips or other parts of the body, all arranged tastefully side by side vertically. Now the ribbons balanced by rectangular oblongs, bounded by ruled charcoal lines, are neater but still vertical. Lipstick oranges and pinks, peach and lilac, all on beige grounds, are accented by long blacks and other color combinations with a distinct art deco flavor. This prompted a fellow artist to remark: "And Scialoja also meant: Let's go back to Mondrian and see what happens." Alas you cannot go back, alas you cannot repeat the Dutchman's crispness, invention, austerity. But it is not only the conscious or unconscious nostalgia here that is disturbing. Some of the rectangles end in irritatingly rounded corners, the pinks are too sweet, too would-be lyrical. In the end the large, tidy compositions are too dry, too past and too close to decoration.

—EOTH SCHLOSS.

Palma de Mallorca, Lorens Artigas, Joaquin Artigas, Sala Polaires 63 Polaires, Palma de Mallorca, to mid-May. This exhibition of ceramics by the father, and sculptures and lithographs by his son, is beautifully presented. Lorens Artigas's ceramics are so pure of line and expert to color and glaze, that it is obvious why there are no experiments. Joaquin Artigas's small sculptures far outshine his lithographs. He takes fingerprints, a leaf, knuckles and with each small fragment of a whole, suggests so many other things. There is poetry in his simplest pieces; at times, he oversteps into prose.

Madrid, Robert Smith, Galeria Vandrés, 28 Don Ramon de la Cruz, Madrid, through April. Imagination and delicacy mark the work of this 24-year-old American painter, Robert Smith's painting on wood construction—blue flowers floating from gray flowers, clouds, a cutout of a heart emerging from a magic box—are all outlined by a thin silver line. He uses silver and gold, with pink and green, in his surprising drawings. It sounds sugary, but isn't. His own name for it is EMBLIM. A delightful change.

Alejandro Vidal, Galeria Egan, 29 Villanueva, Madrid, to May 4. Alejandro Vidal concentrates on a fighting male nude exploding out of a square or recurring in a colorful repeat pattern.

Barcelona, Carbo Berthold, Sala de Arte Moderna, II Petritxo, Barcelona, through April. "The Great Hunt After Forms," title of one of his paintings, could sum up Carbo Berthold's work. Dynamism, rhythm, equilibrium, and a wisp of humor, a rush of movement, a darting glimpse of surrealism and pop jostle together in clear clear colors in the large paintings, and in the smaller cutout-drawing-collages. These are not haphazard experiments, but the result of a search for Form based on the triangular formula "Object-work-place."

Ibkarovits, Galeria Ten, 170 Layetana, Barcelona, to mid-May. Cool elegant old-ladies impassive among machine flowers unaware of their semi-nudity are drawn with a quick sure line, touched here and there by watercolor. Fine, charming end amusing.

Antoni Casas, Galeria AS, 273 Provenca, Barcelona, through April. Paintings, collage and packing boxes painted like ceramics. Casas uses thick, straight and curved lines, controlled drip in places, and heavily applied paint to achieve textures. Silver paper is a ground or part of a collage. The effect is fresh and cheerful, and very pleasing.

Ruiz of Angels Is Sitting Pretty

By Ron Rapoport
LOS ANGELES, April 23.—It was several hours before game time and the California Angels were sitting a bus out to the ball park to play the Oakland Athletics earlier this week.

Very Productive
In terms of percentages, though, Ruiz leads the club in productivity. He has scored three runs (plus him for fourth place on the club in that department), and with a single and a walk is batting 1.000.

Played Marginally
He doesn't think he's going to get up much this season. "I figured I'd pinch-hit six times this season," he said.

Some bad ones
Philadelphia—"You hit your head when you get up."

Chico Ruiz ... on bench in park.

San Francisco—"It's on a level with the ground and all that wind blows at you."
Baltimore—"Too small. You can't hide from the manager."
Houston—"The dugout runs all the way to left field and they show cartoons on the scoreboard."
